

Business Update

FINANCE • REAL ESTATE • TECHNOLOGY

Three new RCF trustees assume posts

Kornfeld, Ritter, Robinson bring varied backgrounds

Rose Community Foundation's board of trustees recently added three new members to its 2016 roster. These community leaders provide guidance and expertise to support RCF's mission, programs and policies. All elections were effective Jan. 1.

Brad Kornfeld has served RCF in a number of roles since 2001. He was on the selection committee for Rose Youth Foundation for many years and recently on the selection committee for the foundation's innovate for good initiative.

Kornfeld is managing partner of The Kornfeld Companies, a Denver-based commercial real estate firm.

He is a kidney donor, dedicating much of his time advocating for organ and tissue donation. He is board chair for Donor Alliance and is on the board of the United Network for Organ Sharing, the organization established by Congress to establish organ allocation and transplant policy in the US.

Jeannie Ritter has been a member of the RCF health committee for five years.

Ritter is best known for her advocacy work around mental health and wellness while serving as the first lady of Colorado (2007—2011).

She continues to work at the Mental Health Center of Denver as mental health ambassador, working to advance integrated care efforts, increase mental health literacy, expand support and ensure access for mental health services.

Ritter serves on many boards and committees, including the Depression Center, CeDAR (Center for Dependency, Addiction and Rehabilitation), the Colorado Coalition for Parity, the Governor's Residence Preservation Fund, the SIM advisory board and the Rocky Mountain PBS board.

Brad Kornfeld

Lisa Robinson served as director of community relations at RCF during its startup, 1995-1999 and is the former director of philanthropic services. She recently sat on the selection committee for the foundation's innovate for good initiative.

Robinson is a member of the board of Kent Denver School and belongs to the honorary trustee council at The Women's Foundation of Colorado.

Jeannie Ritter

She has also been involved with the Children's Museum's center for the young child board, Colorado Parent advisory board at Denison University, SafeHouse Denver development committee and the Tiffany & Co. community board.

Lisa Robinson